

Artistic Statement

I write and direct my own theater pieces that explore identity, race, and diversity, blending humor with deeper meaning so audiences leave both entertained and reflective. My passion for theater comes from the people who have inspired me, and I aim to create work that helps others let their light shine while challenging audiences to think differently. My directing style is hands-on and collaborative: I lead by example, encourage open communication, and create a safe environment where actors feel valued and supported. I come in with a plan but remain flexible, adapting when necessary, and I approach every aspect of production—performance, staging, lighting, and costume—with intention. By combining thoughtful themes, humor, and careful attention to detail, I craft theater that is meaningful, engaging, and distinctly my own.
